

Request concerning transfer of copyrights of previously published articles

Nihon University School of Dentistry, the publisher of "Journal of Oral Science, formerly The Journal of Nihon University School of Dentistry (1959-1997) and The Dental Journal of Nihon University (1958)", intends to digitally archive all previously published materials, starting from the inaugural issue, and make them freely available to the public via the internet without charge or other restrictions. The archive will be placed on J-STAGE, operated by the Japan Science and Technology Agency. In moving forward with this project, the publisher needs to obtain permission from copyright holders (Japanese Copyright Law Articles 21-28).

With regard to the articles published in Volumes 1-41, in which ownership of the copyrights is unclear, the publisher would like to obtain the reproduction rights (Japanese Copyright Law Article 21) and the public transmission rights (Japanese Copyright Law Article 23) from the copyright holders in order to promptly make the electronic archives public for use by researchers. Copyright holders who wish not to grant reproduction and public transmission rights to the publisher are requested to contact the publisher at the address noted below before December 26th, 2009. In the event the publisher is not contacted, the publisher will proceed as though permission had been granted.

Please note that the copyright transfer being requested at this time is for the purpose of making the Journal of Oral Science electronically available to the public, and thus, authors will be allowed to use material for their own research purposes without permission.
